CANNING FACTORY FOR CLAY CITY.

Capitalists Ready to Put up the Plant if Our People Will Do their Part.

The writer has been in correspondence with some capitalists acquainted with the canning factory business, trying to interest them in a factory at Clay City, and at last we are pleased to state to our readers that we have got the proposition very favorably before two industrial companies, and one of these will send a representative here in a short time to look after the organization of a company. The way company proposes to organize the canning company and install the plant is a very liberal plan. Home people will be given the majority of stock in the company, and all of the officers will be local stockholders.

A plant in this canning factory can now be obtained if we will only do our part. The size plant proposed will give employment to several people and furnish yearly a cash market for from $40,000 00 to $50,000 worth of vegetables. Everyone knows the value of our land for raising vegetables. It is the equal of land in the bluegrass costing ten times as much per acre when it comes to raising vegetables and fruits.

There is no other business that would be of the same value to Clay City and the country around it as the canning factory according to the capital invested. The farmers should be especially interested as no other enterprise could possibly benefit them like a canning factory.

JEPHTHA WALTERS KILLS MAN

In Lexington Monday. Walters a Powell Boy.

A special form Lexington Monday says: J. M. Walters to-night shot and probably fatally wounded William Hanna on the street in front of Hanna's home on Seventh street, the shooting being the result of a row. Both the men are laborers.

Early in the evening Walters had been drinking with William Peak and Thomas Bryant at John Furlong's saloon. The three men finally got into Bryant's buggy and drove to Hanna's home. Hanna, who had also been drinking, came out on the street and was having apparently a friendly conversation with the others, when he and Walters became involved in a controversy. Both grew angry and Walters suddenly whipped out a 38 caliber pistol and fired at Hanna, who fell to the ground, wounded in the abdomen. Peak and Bryant seized Walters, who struggled desperately to fire again, and Peak and Bryant were compelled to beat him into submission and hold him until the police arrived.

Hanna was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where it was found the bullet had penetrated the abdomen. An operation was preformed, but there is little expectation of his recovery. Walters was locked up. He was very drunk when he was arrested and told a rambling story in which he claimed he had shot Hanna accidentally.

Mr. Walters is a native of this county where he is known as a peaceable, quiet and clever fellow. He moved to Lexington about six years ago. His many friends here will regret to hear of his present trouble. Hanna died Tuesday.

House Takes Fire

W. E. Heflin, who moved from this county to Clark two weeks ago, came near losing his house by fire. The roof on the main building caught from a spark from the chimney and had a considerable hole burned when it was discovered. Some neighbors happened to be at Mr. Heflin's and with their assistance the fire was soon extinguished with little damage.

Valuable Gold Find in Estill.

A dispatch of Monday says: "Wagersville, Estill county, and the people in that neighborhood are greatly excited. Quartz sent to the assay station at Cartersville, Ga., shows $20 to the ton. There have been other finds near Winston, which assay $4 a ton. It is believed the find at Wagersville shows gold in paying quantities, and a company will be formed to investigate the territory and do mining. Hugh Riddell, an attorney of Irvine, says the field is genuine, and there is much excitement over the assayer's report.

It seems that these Estill fellows are going to keep following in the gold business until they find Swift's Mine. Here's hoping they will and that they now have it in their grasp.

THE TIMES and Courier-Journal both one year for $1.00.
